The Penn State Heart and Vascular Institute and Department of Medicine at the Penn State College of Medicine in Hershey, Pennsylvania seeks a basic science researcher with expertise in mitochondrial calcium metabolism for a tenure-track faculty position at the Assistant Professor level. The successful candidate, when hired, will have an NIH funded R01 and a history of collaboration and productivity. The candidate should have training and expertise in mitochondrial metabolism and genomic research. Requirements for the position include a doctoral degree and an academic record of peer-reviewed publications in which they are a primary/senior author. Candidates should submit a letter of application including statement of current and future research experience and interests, current curriculum vitae, and names and contact information for three references. Apply online at https://psu.jobs/job/83792

To review the Annual Security Report which contains information about crime statistics and other safety and security matters and policies, please go to https://police.psu.edu/annual-security-reports, which will also explain how to request a paper copy of the Annual Security Report.

Penn State is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer, and is committed to providing employment opportunities to all qualified applicants without regard to race, color, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability or protected veteran status.