

Gonzaga University
Department of Human Physiology Lecturer

Gonzaga University's Department of Human Physiology is a growing undergraduate program with approximately 200 majors that seeks to fill a one-year 9-month, full-time, non tenure-track faculty position at the rank of Lecturer-AT, beginning in fall 2018. We are particularly interested in applicants able to teach anatomy and physiology lecture and lab along with other courses in our curriculum.

Required Qualifications: PhD in Physiology awarded before August 1, 2018 or related terminal degree; one year or more of relevant college/university level teaching experience; evidence of scholarly productivity and the ability to advise undergraduate students.

To apply, please visit the Gonzaga University Human Resources website at www.gonzaga.edu/jobs. Applicants must complete an online application. Applications must be received by midnight PST on March 30th, 2018. Questions about this position can be directed to Dan McCann, Chair, Human Physiology, mccann@gonzaga.edu. For assistance with your online application, please call the Human Resources department at 509-313-5996. Please note that your application will not be considered complete until both letters of reference have been uploaded by the references themselves. It is the burden of the applicant to monitor and ensure that both letters have been uploaded. The search committee will review only completed applications received on or before March 30, 2018.

Gonzaga University is a Jesuit, Catholic, humanistic institution, and is therefore interested in candidates who will contribute to its distinctive mission. Gonzaga University is a committed EEO/AA employer and diversity candidates are encouraged to apply. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to their disability status and/or protected veteran status.