The University of Missouri invites applications for two non-tenure track teaching faculty positions in nutrition and/or exercise physiology at any level - Assistant to Full Professor. The successful applicant, at the Associate to Full Professor level, will have a PhD in Nutrition and/or Exercise Physiology or a closely related discipline as well as teaching experience. At the Assistant Professor level we will consider individuals with an MS who have considerable teaching/professional experience. Having ACSM or other certifications in the field would be advantageous. This position will involve teaching at both the graduate and undergraduate level and applicants should be able to teach courses at the basic level as well as courses with clinical applications. The ability to teach MS level courses is preferred. The mission of the Department of Nutrition and Exercise Physiology at the University of Missouri is to improve the health of Missourians and the larger population through research, teaching and outreach related to nutrition and physical activity. We strive to be a diverse set of leaders, innovators and educators who promote improved human health through our focus on nutrition and physical activity. It is expected the faculty will contribute to undergraduate and graduate education and undergraduate advising in the department. Information about the department of Nutrition and Exercise Physiology can be found at the departmental link (http://nep.missouri.edu)

Review of applications will begin immediately and will continue until the positions are filled. Competitive salary will be provided to successful candidates. Please submit curriculum vitae, a narrative of teaching philosophy and educational interests, and the names and contact information of three references. Preferential review of applications received prior to February 1, 2020.
